ARCHBISHOP CHAPPELLE'S DEPARTURE

The Eloquent and Distinguished Prelate Will Leave Santa Fe Tomorrow Night to Assume the Duties of Archbishop of New Orleans—His Work Here—Sketch of His Career.

Archbishop P. L. Chappelle, who for the past seven years has presided with distinguished zeal, fidelity and ability over the destinies of the archdiocese of Santa Fe, having arranged the affairs of his sacred trust here so that everything will be in readiness for his successor, will leave the City of the Holy Faith tomorrow evening for Louisiana to assume the high function and imposing responsibilities of archbishop of New Orleans, to the performance of which he was assigned by his holiness, Pope Leo XIII. some months ago.

The manner in which this important change was brought about is at once interesting and instructive. During last July, about a month after Archbishop Janssen, of New Orleans, had gone to his reward, Archbishop Chappelle paid a visit to Pope Leo at the Vatican in Rome. His holiness, who personally knows the archbishop very well, greeted him with much cordiality, and almost immediately indicated that he wished to transfer the archbishop of Santa Fe to the vacant see of New Orleans and asked the prelate if he had any objection to the proposed change.

The archbishop responded that, when he was first ordained as a priest he made up his mind to go without question wherever he was sent by the authorities of the church, but never to seek promotion of any kind. He added that he was well satisfied with his work in New Mexico, was doing all in his power to promote the moral, social and intellectual well of the people there, felt that his labors were being amply rewarded by the good fruits they were bearing, and hence he was well contented in that field; but, while deeply interested in the people of New Mexico and his work among them, he would go to New Orleans if it was the wish of his holiness. Whereupon the pope declared with much earnestness that such was his wish. This finally disposed of the matter and gained for the see of New Orleans one of the most learned, eloquent, effective and sincere workers in the great Roman hierarchy.

Archbishop's Work in New Mexico.

During the years that Archbishop Chappelle has faithfully and effectively labored for the spiritual and intellectual uplifting of the people of New Mexico, he has commanded the profound confidence and respect of all classes and has gained the enduring affection of all who share in the comforts of his religious convictions and have had the good fortune to come in touch with his charming personality in the church. His going away is generally and sincerely deplored as a serious loss to the entire territory. His noble example, progressive spirit and untiring activity in doing good work may truthfully be classed among the most beneficial influences that have ever reached this territory and naturally his departure is keenly regretted.

But the call to New Orleans was one that he could under no circumstances disobey, and, as transferring him to one of the largest and most important archdioceses in the western world cannot be regarded otherwise than as a conspicuous promotion, naturally he must have felt very much gratified that such a high honor should have been bestowed upon him, unsought, by the head of the church. So the friends of the archbishop in Santa Fe all unite in cordially congratulating him upon his preferment. What is lost for Santa Fe, the promise is great gain for New Orleans.

As already indicated in this article the see of New Orleans is one of the largest and wealthiest in America. The diocese boasts of 207 priests, of whom 126 are diocesan clergymen. It has 107 churches with resident pastors, 54 mission churches, 42 chapels and 18 stations. There are 2 seminaries, 5 colleges, 17 academies, 103 parochial schools, numerous religious establishments of different character, and the Catholic population is estimated at 325,000 souls. So that Monsignor Chappelle, as archbishop of New Orleans, is apt to have more work to do than he found to accomplish at Santa Fe.

Monsieur Chappelle will be the eleventh prelate to occupy the Louisiana see, which ranks as the second oldest one in the United States, it having been erected in 1753. He will occupy the massive and historic archiepiscopal residence on Chartres street, which was built in 1727 and has sheltered all of his predecessors. It is a solid brick dwelling, whose walls, laid in cement that has hardened in granite, give it the appearance of a fortress, which semblance is strengthened by the heavy shutters which bar its windows, its massive portal with its huge iron knocker, and the high wall which encloses the entire property.

Personal sketch of Archbishop Chappelle.

Pleacius Louis Chappelle is a native of France, having been born at Mende, August 28, 1842. He descended from a French family of land owners which has furnished many prominent men in politics, science and the Roman Catholic church. He was educated in his native town and in the college of Angers in Belgium. In 1859, in company with his uncle, he came to America and finished his education in St. Mary's seminary at Baltimore, being graduated from that institution in 1863. On June 29, 1865, he was ordained for the priesthood, and for five years was engaged in missionary work in Montgomery county, Maryland. In 1868, he received from St. Mary's university the title of doctor of divinity, and accompanied Archbishop Spaulding to the Vatican council as his secretary. In 1870 he was appointed pastor of St. Joseph's church, of Baltimore, which position he held until 1882, when he was made rector of St. Matthew's church in Washington City. During his service in that city among the communicants of his church were General Sheridan, General Rosecrans, the family of General Sherman and many others of high standing.

Archbishop Chappelle was one of the seven theologians to prepare the work for the plenary council held in Baltimore in 1884, and for several years he was vice president of the Roman Catholic Indian Bureau. At the present time he is a member of the board of managers of the Catholic University of Washington.

In 1891, he was appointed coadjutor of the venerable Archbishop Salpointe of Santa Fe. The latter resigned on account of old age in January, 1894, and Archbishop Chappelle succeeded him. He is a member of the board of managers of the Catholic University of Washington.

At the close of the program, the board and day-pupils marched in and gracefully filed around variformed tables where a choice luncheon was spread.

The Fifteenth club met on Thursday at Miss Nellie Smith's, 314 East in the club, which was the first meeting in the month, each member contributed a reading from the ephemeral literature of January. The topics introduced ranged from the newest scientific invention to the latest work of fiction, and embraced short reviews of "Dandelion," the new romance by Blackmore, author of Lorna Doone, and Mark Twain's "Following the Equator." After a very agreeable afternoon, the club adjourned to Thursday, the 10th inst., at Mrs. Rapp's, Miss Nellie Smith to preside. If some of the wealthy admirers of Santa Fe in the east would kindly send their disused copies of such works as the above to the public library of Santa Fe, it would be of material assistance to the club, and a great encouragement to the Woman's board of trade, to which indefatigable body the library owes its existence.

In Honor of Archbishop Chappelle.

On Monday, January 31, a select and very artistic entertainment was given in honor of Most Rev. Archbishop Chappelle by the young ladies of Loreto academy. At the close of the program, the board and day-pupils marched in and gracefully filed around variformed tables where a choice luncheon was spread.

His Grace then arose, thanked the pupils, and, in a brief but earnest exhortation, he spoke, as is characteristic of him, of words that were encouraging, animating, heart-prompted and so very stirring that Loretto's inmates will ever cherish in remembrance.

The festival-board was then blessed and all seated themselves, honored by the cheering presence of his grace and the attending clergy.

Permit a word in regard to the decorations. Though at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, daylight was shut out and the hall artistically lighted; lines of Japanese lanterns hung overhead and made a pretty scene. There were nine tables and covers laid for 30 persons.

Table No. 1 was oval-shaped, colors white and gold, with souvenir shields bearing the coat of arms of his grace. The following tables were in heart, fan, diamond, square, wheel, oblong, tambourine and clover-leaf shapes, with covers of corresponding colors, and colors respectively red, pale yellow, pink, green, lavender and blue.

The preceding two weeks, having been spent in the severe trials of semi-annual examination, January 31 was a well-earned holiday.

Children's Day Celebration.

The first children's day, since the holidays, occurred on Friday at Miss Gulliford's. On these occasions the programs are drawn up by the children themselves, and this time it was in the hands of the juniors. The youngsters made a marvelously good selection, introducing between the recitations and musical numbers, the famous scene between Brutus and Cassius. The performers were clad exactly in correct costumes of the period, and rendered their parts remarkably well; it was difficult to know which to praise most, the cynical calm of the sneering Brutus, or the fiery indignation of hot-blooded Cassius. The piano selections by the music pupils afforded evidence of excellent instruction supplemented by careful and intelligent study; this was particularly accentuated by the precision noticeable in the scale passages, in the variety of touch, and the excellent time in which the lively and sparkling compositions were executed. After the Shakespearean scene, the prizes for the preceding year were distributed. They fell to the lot of Elsie and Jessie Ifield, Dovie Day, May Spitz and Morris Thomas, Noyes and Samuel, and Selma and Selma Day. Alice Kain, Ruth Laughlin, Mignon Le Brun and Horace Hall. The proceedings gave great pleasure to the parents and friends of the children who attended, among whom were Mrs. Wiedmann, a visitor enjoying her sojourn here very much, and Mrs. Selma, an amiable wife of the new Indian agent. The afternoon was delightfully closed by various games for the children.
